Connecticut's Black Governors

BOB MACDONNELL / THE HARTFORD COURIER

FINE FORM, and dressed to the nines, Dr. Sedrick J. Rawlins, left, of Manchester, and Eugene Green, of Hartford, wave to the crowd along Albany Avenue during the African American Day parade in Hartford Saturday. They were in costume, depicting Connecticut's black governors, Rawlins as Gov. Thomas Johnson of New Haven and Green as Samuel Huntington of Norwich. The governors were elected leaders of the slave community and represented slaves outside their communities.
